Colin Klein's (Ph.D., Princeton) work focuses on the intersection of the philosophy of science and the philosophy of mind. Recent publications include "An Imperative Theory of Pain" (Journal of Philosophy, 2007), "An Ideal Solution to Disputes about Multiply Realized Kinds" (Philosophical Studies, 2008) and "Reduction without Reductionism" (Philosophical Quarterly, 2009). He is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at University of Illinois at Chicago, and for academic year 2009-2010 he is a fellow at UIC's Institute for the Humanities.
