The interdisciplinary program in Africana Studies is a flexible one that provides opportunities for students to learn about continental Africa and the experiences of people of African descent in the Black Atlantic societies of North America, the Caribbean and Latin America. Africana Studies courses explore the multifaceted political, economic, social, and cultural traditions of Africans and peoples of African descent. The program prepares students for admission to Graduate school or for careers in Journalism, Education, Law, International Relations, and Politics among several others.

AAS 150 P (Honors – Section O) Introduction to Africana Studies - This course will serve as an introduction to the discipline of Africana studies focusing on the study of Africa, Africans, African-Americans/Blacks, Pan-Africanism and the African Diaspora at large. Although emphasis will be placed on the chronology and history of peoples of African descent in America and on the continent of Africa, the course is not designed to provide specialized or in-depth knowledge about any of the above but rather a broad familiarization. Topics in the discipline of Africana Studies will be explored through many basic themes of inquiry including history, politics, health, economics, religion, literature, art and other forms of creative expression and psychology as well as specific areas that may surface in the course of discussion and dialogue.

AAS 290-O Race and Racism – In this course, we will trace the origins of the idea of race and racial differences, examining how and why it came into being as well as its development over the centuries. Furthermore, we will examine how this very powerful notion of difference has overtime shaped societies and human interactions, serving as a rationalization for the practice of slavery as well as for genocide in Europe, Africa, and the Americas. We will examine how the evolution of the idea of race resulted in political exclusion, economic exploitation, and social injustice in a variety of places and times, including the practice of segregation in the United States and South Africa as well as the emergences of the Eugenics movement world-wide.

AAS 350 B Black leadership in the United States – This course investigates the tradition of black leadership in the 20th century and critiques how that tradition has influenced the emergence of 21st century 'black leaders'. Sports, theatre, politics, film, education, and religion are treated as historic sites for understanding the 20th century expression of black leadership. The course will ask students to challenge traditional interpretations of what constitutes leadership generally and "black" leadership particularly. An important component of the course asks students to rethink the concept of black leadership in the "post-Obama" era.

AAS 390 S Blacks in Education: Ideology Vs. Reality – This course will explore the public school (K-12) educational system in the United States within the context of a historical overview and analysis of the disparities exhibited based on socioeconomic status, race and other factors. Emphasis will be placed on the impact of this problem in terms of Black/African American people in the U.S. The journey will begin with segregated public schools within the context of the Civil Rights Movement (including landmark cases which led to changes) as well as specific details regarding busing, integration and other steps that have been taken to try and rectify the educational gap that still exists in the United States. Recent efforts such as No Child Left Behind, Teach for America and other initiatives will be explored to gain insight into whether progress is being made in terms of closing the educational gap. Films including "Waiting for Superman" will be viewed along with lectures and group discussions towards a think tank/solution oriented approach to foster new ideas regarding the revitalization of the American Educational System and resolving the current disparity. A writing credit will be offered for this 3 credit course.
AAS 490 S Senior Seminar: Race and Class in Latin America and the Caribbean - Utilizing data, insights, and concepts from political science, anthropology, sociology, history, demography, statistics, and legal studies, the course explores the Black experience in Latin America and the Caribbean. It recognizes that, notwithstanding the significant variations created by different historical and socio-ecological experiences, there are some fundamental similarities and commonalities in the conditions of African-descended people in the Americas. The common thread is, of course, the experience of forceful uprooting from Africa followed by centuries of slavery in the Americas, varying according, in part, to the degree, form, and evolution of the countries’ integration into the world system. The course examines in a comparative perspective the complex concepts of race and color in these sub-regions and how they relate to the notions of class and power. These relationships are in turn studied in the context of the economic, social, and political development of the respective lands, as well as of their tensions and conflicts, not excluding phenomena of forced displacement or the impact of international and transnational actor, in particular the declaration by the UN and the OAS of 2011 as the International Year of the International Year for People of African Descent.

AAS 490 P Internally Displaced Persons in Africa, Latin America, and Asia - This course will explore the worldwide challenge of internal displacement with special reference to its manifestations in Africa, Latin America, and Asia. There are actually more internally displaced persons (IDPs) in the world than refugees. However, whereas there is a fairly well developed international regime for refugees, the one for the human rights of IDPs is still in gestation. The course will examine in an international and comparative perspective: the causes of internal displacement; its prevention; protection and assistance to IDPs; the status and implementation of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement; the recently adopted AU Convention on Protection and Assistance to IDPs in Africa; the increasingly salient phenomenon of internal displacement due to natural disasters, with special reference to the tsunamis in Indonesia and Japan, and the earthquake in Haiti; the attempts to find solutions to the vexing problem of lack of coordination between the various humanitarian actors involved in the protection and assistance to IDPs, giving rise to the so-called “protection gap”; the connections between internal and international displacement, and how to end internal displacement.

AAS 490 01 Psychology and the Black Experience - This course is an introduction to the psychological issues related to the Black experience in the United States. The course will begin with an overview of Black/African American psychology as an evolving field of study and consider the Black/African American psychology paradigm as one of the key conceptual frameworks for understanding the psychological experiences of Blacks in America. The second part of the course will explore a range of topics that pertain to the psychological experiences of Blacks in America such as racism and discrimination, achievement and testing, kinship and family, religion and spirituality, and Black mental health. A primary focus of this portion of the course will be on the intersectionality of race with other identities such as social class, sexual orientation, ethnicity and gender. Finally, the course will conclude with discussions on the psychological ramifications of negative and positive depictions of Blacks in the media. Throughout the course, a primary objective will be to consider how our knowledge of Black psychological experiences can be used to promote Black psychological health and wellness.

HIS 300 01 The African Diaspora in South Florida - This course examines the historical experiences of the African Diaspora in South Florida through a close analyses of three junctures in the history of the Black experience: The slave trade, abolition, and emancipation; the migration of various African-descended peoples from the Caribbean, Latin America, Central America; and the increasingly addition of people from the African continent itself. The major themes to be tackled in the time frame include migration, culture contact, creation of « new cultures », political activism, and « new » communities in South Florida.
