ENGLISH

ENG 210 B/C  LITERATURE FROM THE AMERICAN TROPICS
MWF 9:05-9:55  Cahill Booth
MWF 10:10-11:00
While literary study is most often determined by national or linguistic tradition, this course will spatially reconceptualize the breadth of “American” literature by approaching literary history through literary geography. The American Tropics is a space that extends from North America through the Caribbean and Latin America and links communities that have common cultures, histories, economies, and environments. Our course materials will be organized around specific places within this region. Some of these sites of encounter are real, such as the Guianas, the Mississippi River, and Haiti, while others are more abstract, such as the Cold Tropics and the Two Cubas. In creating a dialogue between novels, short fiction, poetry, drama, and films that have in common their attention to the same place, we will traverse different linguistic, literary, and cultural backgrounds. Among the questions we will consider: What are the thematic and formal continuities that are common across American literatures? What elements are reflective of distinctive national and cultural character? How does environment influence aesthetic sensibilities? How does a hemispheric approach shape the understanding of American literary production? (Co-listed as AMS322 B/C and LAS301 B/C)

INS 410 51  INS ADVANCED SEMINAR – CARIBBEAN AND CENTRAL AMERICA
R 5:15-7:45  Rodriguez

INS 460 47  UNITED NATIONS SEMINAR
MW 9:45-11:00  Moss
The course will introduce students to the organization and functions of the United Nations, including its structure, its network of agencies, its financing, and the wide range of issues in which the United Nations is involved. We will give special attention to the decision-making process in the UN, its role in the maintenance of peace and security, its role in the defense of human rights, its activities in economic and social progress of peoples, its role in environmental protection and improvement, and its activities in humanitarian issues.

INS 503 47  INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS TOPICS: HUMAN RIGHTS
W 6:00-8:30  KAHN
International Human Rights (IHRs) empower individuals to demand that governments treat them by international standards. But do IHRs, like the right to be free from torture or to fair wages, really make states behave better? In this course, we (A) explore the concept of IHRs and its varieties, political, economic, social; (B) analyze the major international declarations and treaties; (C) evaluate how and with what success IHRs are protected at the national, regional, and international levels; (D) look at what difference IHRs have made to the lives of women, prisoners (the death penalty, torture), the poor, the sick, the perpetrators and victims of mass atrocities (genocide).

INS 504 47  MIGRATION AND DEVELOPMENT
W 6:30-9:00  RODRIGUEZ
The link between migration and development is a pressing issue in policy and academic debates. However, students seldom have the opportunity to address this issue systematically. This course addresses this complex issue through the analysis of global and regional migration trends, the causes and implications of the process, its links to other transnational processes and global politico-economic structures, and the manifold social and economic strategies launched by the migrants once they move across borders. These issues are examined through critical, research-based interdisciplinary interpretations on the links between migration and development.

INS 510 47  CRIME AND JUSTICE
T 9:30-12:00  RESTREPO

INS 511 41  INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTIONS
M 9:00-11:00  RESTREPO
This course explores the role and performance of international institutions of global and regional scope in the promotion of development. The course focuses on the UN system and its Millennium Development Goals, the Organization of American States, the African Union, and the Association of South-East Asian Nations. The class analyzes the nature of these organizations, as well as their functions, ideologies, policies, and programs, their interaction among themselves, with individual states, and with the world system in identifying and responding to the challenges of development.

INS 533 H  TRANSNATIONAL SOCIAL MOVEMENTS
MW 3:35-4:50  REITAN
Focuses on global civic activism and contentious politics, with particular attention to transnational non-state actors - NGOs, social movements, environmental protection, and the emergence of a global civil society.

INS 566 47  US-LATIN AMERICA RELATIONS
W 3:30-6:00  MOSS
Political, economic and strategic aspects of U.S.-Latin American relations; the historical experience and contemporary issues, including the influence of extra-regional parties such as Europe and China.

INS 599 47  IMIGRATION AND HEALTH CARE
This course introduces the links between immigration and the health care system in the United States. The course is divided into two modules. The first module addresses immigrants as professionals in the medical field. The second covers immigrants as individuals in need of medical care. The course includes several perspectives including medical sociology, medical anthropology, nursing studies, bioethics, transnational studies, and migration studies. It is designed for upper-division undergraduates and graduate students from various fields.
