If the instructor is not noted it may be that there are multiple sections or that the instructor is still to be determined. Please consult canelink for more information or updates.

Courses Taught in English

These courses do not require any previous study of a second language. They offer students without any second language expertise an entry into different cultural worlds and a sense of what our courses taught in other languages are all about. These courses may count toward one of the MLL majors or minors; for details, see the MLL advisor for your program. These courses are in English and do not fulfill the language requirement.

ARB 312 (WRI) (S)
Prof. Mona EL SHERIF
Arab Cultures: A Cultural History of the Arab World

This inter-disciplinary course is an inquiry into the defining characteristics, and diversity, of Arab culture. The course covers the main points of Arab cultural history, from pre-Islamic times to the period following independence from European political colonization, through oral and written literature, films, and historical and critical works. In addition to introducing students to the aesthetic heritage of the Arab world, we will discuss colonizing as well as colonized communities, oral versus literate worlds, female versus male spheres, rural versus urban sensibilities, traditional versus modern lifestyles, and autochthonous versus Euro-American practices—and the ways in which they come into contact with each other. Prerequisite: ENG 106.

MLL 325 (WRI) (S)
GER 310 (WRI) (S)
Prof. TBA
Contemporary German Cinema

Through a diverse range of films, the course will critically examine topics such as immigration and multiculturalism in Germany, the history of the GDR, German reunification and the legacy of the Berlin Wall, and the commemoration of the Holocaust and Nazi Germany. Students will develop the critical language and thinking-tools for a sustained analysis of cinema, while also further developing their speaking and writing skills in German. Films may include, among others, Funny Games (Michael Haneke, 1997); Run Lola Run (Tom Tykwer, 1998); Good Bye, Lenin! (Wolfgang Becker, 2003), The Lives of Others (Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck, 2006), The Edge of Heaven (Fatih Akin, 2007); The Counterfeiters (Stefan Ruzokwitzky, 2007), and The Reader (Stephen Daldry, 2008). Reading-and-writing intensive course with discussions and most readings in German. Coursework will include weekly response-papers, in-class presentations, and several formal essays on selected films. Taught in English. Prerequisite: English 106.

UPPER DIVISION (300-400 LEVEL)

FRE 301 (WRI) (F) Prof. Suzanne BRASWELL
Interpreting Literary and Cultural Texts in French
French literature and the socio-cultural contexts to which they belong are rich and varied. In this course, we’ll discuss and analyze a selection of texts, movements, and works of art from diverse periods, from the Renaissance to our era. We’ll also concentrate on developing analytical appreciation of works, through in-class discussions and formal writing. This course will give you a basis for pursuing more advanced studies in French in future semesters. French is the language of instruction. Prerequisite: FRE 214 or its equivalent.

FRE 302 (WRI) (D) Prof. Suzanne BRASWELL
The Cultures of France: Revolutionary Liberty and French National Identity
What does it mean to ‘be French’ and how has French national identity evolved from the period of the French Revolution to our era? How have the Revolutionary ideals of ‘Liberty, Equality, and Brotherhood’ evolved during the modern era and how has this evolutionary process animated thought, language, literature, and culture? In this course, we’ll discuss these issues, while analyzing key historical, literary, and cultural texts, and discussing cinematic treatments of key periods, to conclude by considering French identity and ideals of freedom that continue to animate today’s debates. French is the language of instruction; Prerequisite: FRE 301 (which, with permission of the instructor, may be taken concurrently).
FRE 360 (WRI) (R)  Prof. Alessandra Perisic

UPPER DIVISION (300-500 LEVEL)

GER 301 (WRI) (P)  Prof. TBA
German Expressionism: Art, Film, Literature
This course investigates a variety of German cultural productions from the early twentieth century whose artistic character and attributes are often described as “expressionistic.” The term “Expressionism” is generally used to describe a trend in modern art that emerged in Germany at the beginning of the twentieth century and was characterized by an emphasis on the artist’s subjective perspective, the expression of emotion, and the distortion of reality and, especially after the First World War, was dominated by themes of violence, death, illness, and sexuality. While Expressionism first began in painting and poetry, it subsequently also manifested itself in architecture, theater, dance, prose literature, and film. Focusing primarily on painting and poetry, film, and literature, the course will give students the opportunity to investigate the nature and peculiarities of “expressionist” art while learning about the historical events, political climate, cultural atmosphere, and social changes in Germany in the early twentieth century – such as the First World War and the end of the monarchy, the industrial revolution, and the emergence of the modern metropolis – to which Expressionist artists responded in their work. Reading- and writing intensive course with readings and discussions in German. Prerequisite: GER 212 or equivalent. Closed to native speakers.

GER 310 (WRI)  Prof. TBA
Contemporary German Cinema
Through a diverse range of films, the course will critically examine topics such as immigration and multiculturalism in Germany, the history of the GDR, German reunification and the legacy of the Berlin Wall, and the commemoration of the Holocaust and Nazi Germany. Students will develop the critical language and thinking-tools for a sustained analysis of cinema, while also further developing their speaking and writing skills in German. Films may include, among others, Funny Games (Michael Haneke, 1997); Run Lola Run (Tom Tykwer, 1998); Good Bye, Lenin! (Wolfgang Becker, 2003), The Lives of Others (Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck, 2006), The Edge of Heaven (Fatih Akin, 2007); The Counterfeiters (Stefan Ruzowitzky, 2007), and The Reader (Stephen Daldry, 2008). POR322 (WRI) (R) Prof. Tracy DEVINE-GUZMÁN
POR591 (WRI) (R) História Cultural do Brasil

Esta matéria oferece uma abordagem crítica à formação histórica e teórica do Brasil, começando em 1500 com a colonização da chamada “Ilha da Vera Cruz” e acabando com os levantamentos populares e estudantis de 2014.

Reconhecendo que um semestre nunca seria suficiente para realizar um estudo compreensivo de cinco séculos de acontecimentos históricos, enfocaremos nosso estudo em momentos cruciais, textos chave, e tendências representativas.

Organizaremos nosso estudo cronologicamente, analisando romances, ensaios, poesias, teatro, jornalismo, historiografia, imagens, filmes e músicas para entender como a produção cultural e teórica do Brasil interage com as estruturas políticas e sociais do país.

Culture, Language, and Identity in Spanish-Speaking Societies
This course implicates language and language use in the construction of local, national, and global identities in contemporary Spanish-speaking societies. The cultural, ideological, political, and social dimensions of Spanish language variation are explored, and cultural production is brought into analysis. Particular emphasis is placed on language policy issues, societal attitudes, cultural imaginaries, and assumptions about the Spanish language in bilingual areas of the Spanish-speaking world, e.g. Spanish/Catalan in Spain, Spanish/English in the US, Quechua/Spanish in Perú, Guarani/Spanish in Paraguay. Facets of ethnicity, gender, power, globalization, and the Internet are highlighted. Prerequisite: SPA 301 or 343.
SPA 322 (WRI) (Q)  Prof. Viviana DIAZ –BALSERA
After 1492: Cultures of Globalization and Resistance in Colonial Latin America
The colonization of indigenous peoples in the New World entailed their insertion by Spain into global socio-economic circuits and a planetary Catholic communitas. A significant part of this colonialist labor was attempted not only by military force but also through the more subtle powers of representation yielded by extensive inquiries into indigenous cosmographies, histories and traditions. The course--interdisciplinary in its sources and approach--will examine historical narratives, legal documents, art works, visual artifacts, poems and testimonies in which knowledge about Amerindians was deployed, debated, and resisted by Spanish, indigenous, criollo, and mestizo cultural agents. The course will emphasize the struggle for producing defining images of indigenous peoples in colonial Mexico and Peru. Prerequisite: SPA 301 or 343, or permission of the instructor. Taught in Spanish, but some readings will be in English.

SPA 330 (WRI) (T)  Prof. Elena GRAU-LLEVERIA
Modernismos Revisited from Theories of Gender
This course is designed to study the literary and artistic production of Modernismo (1880-1914). The focus of the study and analysis of the corpus is the gender politics that were at play in that time in social and artistic imaginaries. The methodology to undertake such project combines artistic theories about and of the period and theories of gender to study the corpus of texts chosen for this course. The aim is to study and analyze the gender ideologies and the gender politics that the different texts present. Prerequisite: SPA 301 or 343.

SPA 360 (WRI) (R)  Prof. Crissy ARCE
Intertextuality between Music, Literature and Film in the Caribbean
This course will explore the intertextuality between Caribbean poetry, novels, film and popular music. Music, as one of the most popular and democratic art forms, has played a unique role in both cultivating an alternative repository of popular history and a subaltern collective history. Furthermore, the unique influence of music on literature and film produces an artistic symbiosis and aesthetic mutualism that weaves itself in and out of not only literary cultural products, but also filmic ones. Prerequisite: SPA 301 or 343.

Identidades periféricas en la literatura española del XX y XXI
Este curso dará una visión panorámica de la literatura española desde aproximadamente 1914 hasta nuestros días, concentrándonos en el papel protagónico que juegan en ciertas grandes obras de narrativa, poesía y teatro las figuras que las sociedad dominante relega a sus márgenes, ya sea porque ocupan espacios transgresores y anti-sociales o porque son figuras que pasan desapercibidas en una sociedad sexista. Entre otros personajes, exploraremos, por ejemplo, las figuras del “gitano” en la poesía (Romancero gitano [1928]) y el “homosexual” en el teatro (El público [h. 1930]) de Federico García Lorca; el travesti en la obra de teatro La llamada de Lauren (1984), de Paloma Pedrero; la “chica rara” en fragmentos de la novela “tremendista” de posguerra, Nada (1945), de Carmen Laforet y a la modista en el bestseller de éxito internacional, El tiempo entre costuras (2009), de la escritora contemporánea María Dueñas; así como los “punkies,” drogadictos y demás jóvenes desafectados en poesía y relatos de la Generación X; para acabar con la literatura de los “mutantes,” los vanguardistas actuales. Por tanto, el curso cubrirá desde la vanguardia de principios del XX hasta la vanguardia de principios del XXI, haciendo un repaso entre medias a los distintos tipos de realismo en narrativa de posguerra y actual, así como explorando brevemente las tendencias fundamentales en poesía y teatro. La escritora María Dueñas estará en UM como Visiting Scholar a finales del semestre, por lo que contaremos con su presencia en algunas de nuestras clases. Prerrequisito: SPA 301 o SPA 343.

Spanish for Health Care Professions
The objective of this course is to improve oral, reading and writing skills in Spanish with a focus on the specific needs of health care professionals. Besides covering the skills needed for interviewing and giving instructions to patients in the office or hospital setup, we will focus on the use of medical terms in Spanish that will enable a doctor or a health care practitioner to interact with Spanish-speaking professionals in international conferences, and to discuss, present and write medical papers in Spanish. The course is organized around medical specialties, with a focus on current trends, ethical dilemmas and the different situations where medicine is challenged by other disciplines, traditions and beliefs. The overall objective is to prepare students who already have an advanced level of Spanish to integrate that language into their chosen career. Prerequisite: SPA 301 or SPA 343.
