

INTERNATIONALLY ACCLAIMED

EVIDENCE AND INQUIRY

Towards Reconstruction in Epistemology
SUSAN HAACK

"...brilliantly steers a middle course between what Haack calls the Old Deferentialists and the New Cynics, between cognitive optimists who claim too much for human knowledge and the many species of cognitive pessimist who claim far too little."

—TLS (Times Literary Supplement)

"...superb...stands in sharp contrast to the bombast and carelessness characteristic of postmodernist treatments of similar topics."

—MLN (Modern Language Notes)

"...encompasses almost all contemporary theories of knowledge...persuasively articulates and defends Haack's own theory, foundherentism, which no doubt will soon spark fruitful discussion under new ground rules in epistemology."

—Greek Philosophical Review

"...a milestone in Anglo-American philosophy"

—Anuario Filosófico, Spain

"...a profound and complex work"

—Revista de Filosofía, Spain

"...remarkably clear and rigorous...; important ... original"

—Archives de Philosophie, France

"...powerful and valuable"

—Australasian Journal of Philosophy

"...at once a fine introduction and a significant contribution" —Hilary Putnam, Harvard University

"...most impressive ... comprehensive ... judicious"

—Lord Quinton, Oxford

"...reasonable and original ... forceful and refreshing"

—Roderick M. Chisholm, Brown University

"...a uniquely thorough critique ... a satisfying synthesis"

—Sir Peter Strawson, Oxford

"...likely to be the theory that will carry epistemology into the 21st century"

—Peirce Project Newsletter
